The Porsche 993. This was not only the very last 911 to be fitted with an air-cooled engine but also according to those in the know by far the prettiest 911. This very good condition one was supplied by the Porsche dealership in Padova in 1996. It has been in the Netherlands since 2015 and has been extensively maintained ever since. This Porsche 993, thanks to the above-mentioned care, looks great and is in an excellent mechanical state.

The striking colour scheme is obvious at first glance. The car has a "Polarsilber Metallic" finish paired with a black leather interior trim. The car stands on 19 inch Cup rims with Gun Metal Grey hubs and a polished lip. Both the car's bodywork and paintwork are in very fine condition. The correctly aligned panelwork is nice and thin. The wheels were refurbished a few years ago and still have retained their great appearance.

The car's interior has similarly been well cared for. The wonderfully supple leather is in very good condition. The original dashboard is also still in great condition. The car has air conditioning, a Becker radio and a trip computer. The leather-clad steering wheel and Tiptronic gearshift lever are also in very good shape.

Excellent care has been expended on the 993's mechanical upkeep. The car has been fitted with a new Bilstein suspension, new anti-roll bars, revamped steering house, new brake ducts, a new cooling fan and a fantastic sounding RSR exhaust. The automatic system has been flushed through, a Lojack fitted as well as many other preventative measures carried out. The car has been driven on a regular base. To put it another way; this is the perfect mix to get a perfect Porsche drive and this 993 does not disappoint in that aspect. The tiptronic shifts perfectly and the 3.6 litre six-cylinder boxer engine runs fantastically. It develops 272 Ps making light work of shifting this 911.

To top it all this 911 comes nicely documented. There is a large file containing its "birth certificate", the car's original booklets and every recent invoice from the last few years.

A perfectly presented and maintained Porsche 993!
